Core Disciplines

Civil Engineering

Our experienced engineering teams can help take your project from site investigation and due diligence through entitlement, accurate and economical preliminary and final design and permitting. Our skill at total project management ensures a high degree of coordination with government entities, utility companies and contractors.

Surveying

Accurate surveying is the cornerstone of our work and the foundation on which your project is built. Our surveying crews provide everything from boundary, topographical, roadway and wetland surveys to subdivision plats to construction staking and land title surveys.

Water Resources Management

Stormwater management is part of every project, which is why our water resources team gets involved early. We address all aspects, regulations and impacts of water movement, storage, treatment and reuse and work to identify the most cost-effective solutions for your project.

Construction Management

We understand that the stakes are high on construction projects. At Manhard, we focus on the details of your project including budgets, schedules, conflict resolution and overall project coordination. We reduce your risk with a detailed management plan that takes you from groundbreaking through final inspection.

Landscape Architecture

Landscape architecture is equal parts form and function. Our landscape architects make the most of your site's natural features while taking into consideration your technical, budgetary and scheduling needs.

Land Planning

Our land planning teams work with engineering staff to prepare plans that are cost-effective, balanced and buildable by addressing environmental issues, grading, zoning and permitting. Site studies are all-inclusive, covering details such as site access, state and local regulations, community expectations and more.
